BATTLEFIELD TO COST $45,000.00

Maintenance of National Park, Including Salaries and Pay of Employees, Expected to Reach that Total during Next Fiscal Year.

In the annual report of the Gettysburg National Military Park Commission for the past year, an estimate of $45,000 is given as the probable expenditures for the next fiscal year, which extends from July 1, 1915 to June 30, 1916.

Included in this sum are the following salaries, commissioners, $7200; engineer, $2100; rodman, $660; assistant superintendent, $960 and $600; guards, $3000; messenger, $540 and hostler $480. The estimate for the pay of artisans, laborers and teams for the year is given at $18,061.27.

The report estimates that during the twelve months in question there will be required $8500 for construction work, $4000 of which will be for piking avenues, $1400 for repairs to avenues; $1000 each for land and fencing; and $1100 for United States farm buildings, tablets and markers.

Maintenance expenses are expected to total $2898.73. Among the items under this head are $300 for repairs to buildings; $375 for millwork, hardware and merchandise for office; $300 for herbicide, paints and oils; $250 for ironwork and repairs to machinery; $406.20 for motor-truck repairs, supplies, etc.; $160 for books, print paper, and stationery; $270 for tools and repairing tools; $150 for sand, lime and cement; $410 for type-writing; and other miscellaneous items.

During the past fiscal year the expenses totaled $37,035.46 of which $28,830.28 was for salaries, laborers, artisans, and teams; $4507.13 for construction; and $3698.05 for maintenance.

The report shows that there have been acquired 2355 acres of land for the National Park, and there are 55.31 miles in the park of which 22 miles are telford avenues, 9.31 miles macadam, and 24 miles earth roads. The cost of the roads graded and piked has averaged $8445.50 a mile. In speaking of the care given the Park the report says:

"The woodmen continue their work in the woodlands and groves of the park, and have made great improvements in the appearance of these woodlands during the year. The west slope of Little Round Top has been cleared of undergrowth and bushes and now presents the appearance it did during the battle—almost bare of shrubbery.

"Two parties of mowers go over the sides of the avenues and other open ground not leased, and around the monuments and markers, mowing and clearing the grounds and keeping it in good order from the time the grass begins to grow in the spring until late in the autumn.

"There are two steam rollers and one horse roller, which are used to keep the surface of the avenues and the piked roads in good condition and to roll newly spread screenings."

POOR LUCK FIRST DAY OF SEASON

Only One Deer Reported as Having been Killed on the Mountain on Opening Day. Hundreds of Men Scouring Hills for them.

In spite of ideal weather conditions, and the fact that South Mountain is fairly over-run with men in search of deer, only one of the beautiful, fleet-footed animals had been reported as falling to-day.

This deer was killed by Josef Harlacher, a student at the State Forestry Academy at Mont Alto, who was hunting alone and shot a hundred pound spike buck along the pipe line at the rear of the White Pine Sanitarium hospital.

It is doubtful if the mountains were ever so full of deer hunters as they are this year. Starting last Saturday, they began to establish their camps, and Sunday saw scores of them go to the mountains. On Monday the hunters appeared in still larger numbers and it would seem that the deer will be lucky that gets out of the next ten days alive. One resident of Cash-town said this morning:

"I have been living here for a good many years but never in my recollection have there been so many deer hunters to pass through on their way to the camps as we saw on Monday. It looked almost like an army. One party from York all wore red caps and presented quite a military appearance as they proceeded up the pike with their guns glistening in the sunlight."

From many parts of the mountain come reports of the deer being plentiful. At Caledonia park, herds have been seen at different times and all through that section bucks and does have appeared during the summer and early fall so that the hunting season is expected to yield large returns for practically every camp. For many miles the mountain is dotted with the camps and there remains little good hunting land that is not covered. Individual hunters are on hand to hunt independently and they often fare just as well as the ones who benefit from the systematic work of a camp drive.

The cessation of the forest fires through the welcome rains of Sunday evening were most timely, for many believed that the fires would ruin the annual sport. The deer have been saved and the principal territory untouched by the flames, so that the hunting should be just as good as ever.

FARMER LOSES MANY CATTLE

Two Thousand Dollars Worth of Livestock Condemned on Fuss Farm Near Emmitsburg. Cattle Had Hoof and Mouth Disease.

Cases of the foot-and-mouth disease, which has spread among live stock in many parts of the country, have been discovered in the vicinity of Emmitsburg. State Veterinarian Dr. L. Hickman and other inspectors visited the farm of Edward M. Fuss, near Emmitsburg, on Monday and, finding that about 10 head of cattle were suffering with the disease, ordered all the live stock on the place killed and the carcasses buried.

Appraisers from the neighborhood were at once secured. The stock to be killed include 39 head of cattle, 22 shoats and 10 hogs. The valuation placed on the stock was $1,950. The Federal and State governments will each pay half of this loss.

In the afternoon Mr. Fuss made ready to have the big ditches dug to bury the carcasses, and it is expected that the animals will be slaughtered within the next 24 hours.

The live stock inspectors are making a close investigation of the conditions in that vicinity. It is hoped that the infection has not been carried to any other farms in that neighborhood.

It was stated at the Fuss home that the cattle which were affected had been bought about three weeks ago from Mr. Patterson, of that vicinity, who, it is understood, secured the stock from Lancaster, or thereabouts. Mr. Fuss bought two lots of cattle, putting them on his place to fatten, as he has been in the custom of doing. He does not run a dairy farm. For the past three weeks there have been about 39 cattle on the place.

He had bought two lots of stock, the first being purchased about six weeks ago, but among these none has been troubled with the disease. The ten in the last lot are the ones that have been affected, along with the milk cows kept with them. Monday morning it was stated that the cattle showed signs of improvement. They have been given medicine, but because of the danger of infection the safest plan is to have the cattle killed and their carcasses buried.

The cattle belonging to Mr. Fuss limped and were sore about the mouth. It is said that those affected have lost considerable weight. From the symptoms stated they were clear cases of the foot-and-mouth disease.

Carroll, Howard and Montgomery counties in Maryland have been placed under quarantine by proclamation of the Governor, so that the shipment of all cattle, sheep or hogs to or from these counties will be forbidden. A similar quarantine has been in effect in Frederick, Washington and Alleghany counties since Friday.

The Pennsylvania State College herd of cattle, valued at $30,000, was probably saved from the foot and mouth disease by the failure to send its blue ribbon winners to the National Dairy Show, held in Chicago, October 22. No cattle from the institution were exhibited at that show.

The live stock show, which was scheduled for next Saturday at the State College, in connection with Governor's Day, has been indefinitely postponed.

Pennsylvanian Gets Quick Relief From Disorders Of His Stomach

L. E. Beckwith Says Mayr's Wonderful Remedy Gave Him Great Help.

I. E. Beckwith of Harrisburg, Penn., was a victim of disorders of the stomach and intestinal tract. He tried treatment after treatment. Nothing gave him relief.

Then one day he discovered Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy—and soon was happy.

Mr. Beckwith wrote to Geo. H. Mayr, the maker of the remedy and for twenty years the leading druggist of Chicago:

"I believe that Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is the greatest stomach remedy on earth. One dose would convince any one who is troubled with his stomach of its wonderful merits. It removed some of the most awful looking stuff from my stomach. I have taken other remedies, but they never helped me."

Just such letters come from users of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy in all parts of the country. It is known everywhere. The first dose convinces—no long treatment.

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy clears the digestive tract of mucus, accretions and poisonous matter. It brings swift relief to sufferers from ailments of the stomach, liver and bowels. Many declare it has saved them from dangerous operations; many are sure it has saved their lives.

We want all people who have chronic stomach trouble on constipation, no matter of how long standing, to try one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy—one dose will convince you. This is the medicine so many of our people have been taking with surprising results. The most thorough system cleanser we ever sold. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is now sold here by People's Drug Store and druggists everywhere.

ALLIES REPEL NEW ATTACKS

Franco-British Troops Take Offensive in Flanders.

HARD FIGHTING CONTINUES

Strong Entrenchments in Rear Prepared by Teutons in Case of Retreat—Rushing Reinforcements to Poland.

London, Nov. 10.—The advance of the Russian army into East Prussia and into Silesia has evidently alarmed the Kaiser, for a heavy movement of troops to the threatened region is reported in progress.

From Amsterdam, Holland, comes information that the correspondent of Tiedt, at Antwerp, reports that "the movement of German troops from the western theater of war on a big scale is now progressing. A large number appear to have been withdrawn from the Yser."

The correspondent adds: "Long military trains filled with men and munitions of war are moving into Germany by way of Brussels and Louvain."

It is believed that these troops are being sent to reinforce the armies now retreating from Poland.

Up to the present time Germany has been fighting, generally speaking, in the territory of her enemies, but now she would appear to be more or less seriously menaced from the east by the victorious armies of Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief of the field, the advance guards of which are less than 200 miles from Berlin.

It is mere speculation, of course, to say that Germany may be forced forthwith to retire from Belgium or even cease her offensive in this arena. In certain areas of France and Belgium the allies are taking a vigorous offensive, but it is too early yet to predict that Germany will not renew her smashing tactics in an effort to break through the line and that there will not be much hard fighting around Ypres.

In any event, German retirement from Belgium probably would be very slow, as the forces of Emperor William have made the entire country behind their battle line one vast fortification, with trenches even more carefully prepared than those they are still holding in France.

New attacks by the Germans against the allies' lines at Dixmude and Ypres have been repulsed. All the way from the former town to the river Lys the Franco-British-Belgian front has made slight progress, according to the war office bulletin.

In Alsace a German attack on the heights of St. Mary's Pass is said to have failed badly.

Elsewhere along the battle line there has been no change, the allies holding the positions recently gained along the Aisne.

It is estimated that the crushing of the German offensive at Ypres, where they concentrated for the most violent assaults, has not been accomplished without heavy loss. It fell to the British troops to check and then throw back the massed forces with the bayonet. The fighting is declared to have been the most terrific of the war.

Late reports to the war office declare that night attacks are a feature of the new German thrust for the coast. Three violent assaults were made against the allied lines, but all were repulsed. The artillery engagement, which has been in progress continually, has grown more violent all along the line.

Southeast of Bethune a fierce artillery duel is in progress between the Germans and French and Bethune has been partially destroyed.

So serious does the Kaiser regard his present situation, in view of the pouring of Russian troops across his eastern border, that he has held a council of war with his leading commanders.

The following official bulletins were issued:

FRENCH.

"There has been no notable modification in the situation by reason of the difficulties which an intense fog has created in connection with operations of any extent.

"In the north the day has been good. We have maintained our positions between the river Lys and Langemarck and made appreciable progress between Langemarck and Dixmude.

"On our left wing the Germans have undertaken again an offensive movement on Dixmude and in the region of Ypres. To the southeast of Ypres their attacks have been everywhere repulsed.

"At the end of the day, referring to the entire front between Dixmude and the Lys, we have made progress along the major part of the line. Nevertheless, our advance is slow on account of the offensive movement undertaken by the enemy, and because of the strong organization the enemy already has had the time to effect around his points of support. Furthermore, since the beginning of the fighting the fog has made operations difficult, particularly between the Lys and the Oise.

"On the center, along the Aisne, the progress set forth in the official communications of Sunday has been maintained. In the Argonne and in the vicinity of Verdun there have been only actions of minor importance.

"On our right wing, in Lorraine, there is nothing to report. In Alsace fresh attacks on the part of the Germans directed against the heights of Mount Sainte Marie have again resulted for them in a decided check."

GERMAN.

"During the evening a sortie of the enemy from Nieuport, which was repeated during the night, completely failed.

"In spite of obstinate resistance, our attacks on Ypres are progressing slowly, but steadily.

"The hostile counter attacks south-west of Ypres have been repulsed and several hundred men were taken prisoners."

BELGIAN.

"The situation at Nieuport is stationary, with slight advantage to us. On the remainder of the front almost complete quiet prevails.

"The enemy will occupy, on the right bank of the Yser, several points of support which have been cannonaded by our artillery. Dixmude has been bombarded by the enemy."

EGYPT IS INVADIED BY TURKISH ARMY

Ottoman Troops Cross Border
Into British Colony.

Rome, Nov. 10.—Official announcement was made by the Ottoman embassy that a Turkish army had invaded Egypt.

It was also stated that the Russian warships in the Black sea had been driven to shelter in the Russian fortified ports.

The following dispatch from Constantinople was given out at the embassy:

"With the help of the Almighty, the Turkish army crossed the Egyptian frontier on Sunday. The Russian fleet in the Black sea has sought refuge in the military ports of Russia. The Ottoman fleet has been bombed by the Russian fleet, causing heavy damage. The English fleet has departed from the waters of Akabah, leaving one cruiser there."

It was semi-officially stated at the embassy that the Ottoman command expected the inhabitants of Egypt to join the Turkish army and fight against the British. No information was given out as to the size of the Turkish forces that invaded Egypt.

Fear Uprising in India.

London, Nov. 10.—Rumors persist here that unrest has developed among the vast Mohammedan population of India.

Although official statements minimize the danger of the situation in India, it is admitted that the call to a "holy war," issued by the head of the Mohammedans in Constantinople has had its effect.

The Hindu agitators have called upon their followers to throw off the British yoke.

Prepare to Fight All Winter.

Berlin, Nov. 10.—Germany has begun enormous preparations for winter campaigns in both the eastern and western theaters of war, it is officially announced by the war office. Tents, sleighs and warm clothing are being collected for the entire army. Extra heavy clothing for the privates and fur coats for the officers are being provided. From the present indications fighting will go on in both areas of hostilities in spite of the cold weather.

Kaiser Sending Troops From Belgium

Rotterdam, Nov. 10.—According to the Courant's correspondents great hordes of German troops are being withdrawn from Belgium for use against the Russians. One correspondent says: "Many trains carrying cavalry, infantry and artillery have left Brussels and Louvain for Germany, with the cars marked in chalk 'To Russia'."

The regular meeting of the Royal Arcanum will be held at eight o'clock this evening.

LABOR OUT FOR WORLD PEACE

Plan Urged in Convention to Prevent War.

HOW A. F. OF L. GROWS

62,882 Members Were Received Last Year Into the Organization—$102,492 in the Treasury.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—The formation of an international society for the prevention of war was urged by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in its annual report to the convention, representing 2,027,671 members of the allied organizations in session here.

Convinced that the greatest burden of the European war is falling on the shoulders of the toilers, the council declared:

"So far we have made little progress in organizing agencies for organizing international relations to maintain peace and justice. The war has shown that war cannot be stopped by resolutions and that war cannot put an end to itself.

"Militarism and competitive armament must be abolished and tribunals for awarding justice and agencies for enforcing determinations must be instituted. International issues and interests exist. Political institutions should be established to correspond to political developments. Those most interested should lead in demands for world federation and the rules of reason between nations. The working people of all lands bear the brunt of war. They do the fighting, pay war taxes and suffer most from the disorganization of commerce and industry which results from war.

"The working people, the masses of the world's population, can end all wars if they but have the independence to think and to give their convictions reality by daring to do. Wars will cease only when society is convinced that human life is really sacred and when society establishes agencies, international as well as national, for protecting lives."

The officers declared that the convention must adopt some constructive plan to stop warfare.

The other features of the report were:

Labor exemption in Clayton anti-trust bill hailed as greatest act toward industrial freedom in history of the world.

Land owning and police power of mining companies called "feudal and brutal" and preventive legislation urged.

Opposed to so-called "efficiency" system in Washington bureaus.

For general "literacy test" in immigration laws.

For woman suffrage.

For limitation of child labor under federal statute.

Additional legislation for accident prevention and the obliteration of preventable occupational diseases.

The great growth of the federation was emphasized in the annual statement of Secretary Frank Morrison. Since the meeting a year ago, he reported, 62,882 laborers have joined, making the total membership over 2,000,000. In twenty-five states and in Porto Rico 225 chapters were issued to new branches. There was a balance of $102,492.81 in the treasury at the close of the year.

Secretary Morrison declared that as a result of the 957 strikes the conditions of 74,350 workers were materially improved. The total cost of the strikes, counting the $109,294 that was raised by the unions for the assistance of strikers, amounted to $4,389,510.

WANTED TO LYNCH NEGRO

Farm Hand Accused of Attacking a Child Landed in Jail.

West Chester, Pa., Nov. 10.—Bruce Archer, a negro farm hand employed by Ralph R. Bryson, of Downlin's, was brought to jail here, charged with attempting to attack Bryson's eleven-year-old daughter.

The screams of the child aroused her father and mother, who went to her rescue, and the negro fled. Cornered, he is said to have drawn a revolver and tried to shoot Bryson, but the weapon failing to explode, he ran out of the house.

Bryson telephoned to Thomas Gray, chief of police at Downingtown, and soon a posse was out searching for Archer. He was caught, and there were threats of lynching, but Gray prevailed upon the angry men to allow him to lock up the prisoner.

Railroad Loses Land Case.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Dismissal by the court of claims of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway claim against the government for 3,000,000 acres of land in Oklahoma valued at $61,280,000, which the railroad company claimed under old land grants, was affirmed by the supreme court.

Bedouins Attack Italians.

Rome, Nov. 10.—Bedouins, supported by artillery, have attacked an Italian raiding party at Slonta, near Cyrene, but were repulsed. An Italian officer and six men were killed. Bedouins also attacked a caravan at Faures, near Bencasi.

13 STATES QUARANTINED

Delaware and New Jersey Added to States With Cattle Disease.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Delaware and New Jersey were added to the list of quarantined states because of the discovery of foot and mouth disease at Wilmington and Bergen. This brings the number of quarantined states up to thirteen.

All shipments of live stock from Canada to the United States will be barred by a quarantine order prepared at the department of agriculture. There is no evidence of foot and mouth disease in the Dominion, but infected cars have been sent over the border, and the order is issued to prevent their return.

Orders Cattle Killed.

Reading, Pa., Nov. 10.—On a farm in Upper Tulpehocken township the government inspectors found traces of the foot and mouth disease and ordered a herd of seventeen fine cows killed.

U. S. CROPS BREAK RECORD FOR VALUE

Farm Products Are Valued at $5,068,742,000.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The important farm crops of the United States this year are worth $5,068,742,000 or $104,000,000 more than the value of the same crops last year, notwithstanding a loss of $418,000,000 sustained by cotton planters on lint alone as a result of the European war. The corn crop is estimated at 2,705,692,000 bushels.

Preliminary estimates of the important farm crops announced by the department of agriculture and statistics of the average prices paid to producers on Nov. 1 indicate that this year's wheat and corn crops are the most valuable ever grown in the United States; that the wheat and apple crops are record harvests, and the potato crop is the second largest ever raised.

The huge wheat crop and the increased price for that cereal, the big corn and apple crops and the increased price of oats, barley and rye more than offset the big loss in the value of the cotton crop resulting from the war.

$150,000 FIRE IN READING

Five Dwellings, Factory, Warehouse and Lumber Yard Destroyed.

Reading, Pa., Nov. 10.—Five two-story frame dwellings, a portion of Yocum Brothers' three-story brick cigar factory, a three-story junk warehouse owned by Reuben Moyer, and D. B. Hoffa & Sons' lumber yard, located two blocks away from the business district, were destroyed in a spectacular blaze which occurred here, entailing damages aggregating $150,000.

Several hundred employees were at work in the Yocum Brothers' factory, which is the largest industry of its kind in this section. The employees, mostly women, were led out unscathed.

SERVIANS LOSE KOSTAJNIK

Austrians Conquer Stronghold Believed to Be Impregnable.

Vienna, Nov. 10.—The following official statement was issued here:

"In the southwestern war theater the battle on the whole front continued with undiminished force. In spite of the obstinate resistance of the enemy entrenchment after entrenchment near Kroupnik was taken.

"Until Sunday morning one of the strongest points, Kostajnik, which the Servians believed impregnable, was stormed by our troops. The number of prisoners and captured guns is not known."

Sleepwalker Killed by Fall.

Cootesville, Pa., Nov. 10.—Walking in his sleep, Edward Young, sixty-five years old, fell down stairs and fractured his skull. He died in the hospital. He leaves a widow and several children.

Asks Canada For 100,000 Men.

Montreal, Nov. 10.—A dispatch from Ottawa says that Earl Kitchener, the British secretary of war, has asked Canada to furnish 100,000 men for the war against Germany.

KILLED BY MULE

Wendle Rehm, of York County, Found Dead from Fractured Skull.

Wendle Rehm, about forty years old, married and the father of five children, was found dead on the road one half a mile from Yocumtown Monday evening at 5:30 o'clock. Death was caused by a fractured skull sustained when kicked by a mule. Whether he was kicked before he fell from the wagon, on which he was hauling tin roofing from Goldsboro to Lewisberry for Joseph Sutton, or while falling from the vehicle is not known.

Dr. S. J. Roberts, Goldsboro, who was on the road to his home, a short distance from where Mr. Rehm was found, arrived at the scene of the accident within ten minutes, having been reached by telephone. He found that Rehm was past surgical aid.

Rehm, who was a farmer, living a half mile northeast of Lewisberry, was driving his own team. One of the mules was young and known as a kicker. Going down the slight grade where the accident occurred, Rehm is supposed to have leaned over to apply the brake and lost his balance, or to have been kicked by the young mule while he was in that position. The skull was fractured on the left side at the forehead. From the marks on the head it was evident to the physician that the injury was inflicted by the mule's kick.

HUMOR, PATHOS IN NEW STORIES FROM EUROPE'S BATTLEFIELDS

Soldiers Become Fatalists. "Angels Have No Nation," Says Wounded German.

English Indian Troops Think That Bursting Shells Are Part of Fireworks Display.

CORRESPONDENTS at the front or marooned in obscure places while the great European conflict rages manage daily to get through some grimly humorous or tragic side lights of the war. Here are some of the best that have come over the cables or by mail:

Vivid is the description of life on the battlefield as given in a letter from a French soldier printed in the Figaro. Shrapnel searching in deadly gusts over infantry which can do nothing but wait, card games in the trenches, heroic cook details who every day march from their shelters back to the kitchens under fire all the time—these are incidents related by the "pion-pion." He writes:

"Spades are trumps—the king of hearts I cut.

"Do not think that I am writing this on the marble topped table of a cafe while a quiet game of cards is going on. No; the Germans are two kilometers away from us and my comrades, their loaded pieces beside them, are playing a few hands of manille in the trenches while waiting.

Courage Is Not Enough.

"It is not sufficient for soldiers to be courageous. They must also have patience—lots of patience. For war today is far different from what little boys who maneuver their lead soldiers on the floor imagine it.

"Since the commencement of the campaign our regiment has taken part in nine engagements, of which three were big battles, and has been mentioned in the orders of the day. And with all that there are whole companies the men of which have not fired a shot—not a single shot. And these companies did not have the easiest work, either. To them fell the most thankless, most perilous, most grueling mission of all—that of supporting artillery. This is how we carried it out:

"The soldiers are there, behind a crest. Beside them fifty yards away are the belching guns. The enemy is far away, but his cavalry is mobile. A platoon of uhlanes, well led, might attempt to carry off the guns. It is necessary to have infantry support. At present the German guns are replying. They do not know where our battery is, but they are searching for it. Their shells come nearer and nearer. Our soldiers do not see the enemy. They lie there with their useless rifles beside them. They look at what? The shells, which are bursting very near now. A terrific crash—a wave of earth covers a whole section. The men get up and count themselves. No; this time nothing. But the next? Who knows?

No foe Near, but Must Stay.

"Are we going away? Who will protect the battery? No; we must stay.

"The aviators have signaled that there are no parties of the enemy in the vicinity, but nevertheless one never knows. It is necessary to stay.

"And now the German shells are bursting over us as we crouch, offering as small a surface as possible.

"A shell bursts on the right. The sergeant's canteen is smashed by a flying bit. He has escaped. Shell to the left—two wounded! Right in the center this time—one hurt, by a miracle. Five are wounded now, and we patch them up with first aid bandages. The rest of us look at each other. Whose turn

Situation Well Defined.

If you intend to go to work, there is no place better than where you are. If you do not intend to go to work, you cannot get along anywhere. —Abraham Lincoln.

"You Are an Angel!"

A vivacious English woman, the wife of a very well known officer bearing a famous name, today returned over the border into Holland after an adventurous day's tour behind the German lines. "I made up my mind to see for my self what was going on," she said, "so I disguised myself as a Flemish peasant woman, with the assistance of the national costume—earrings, head-dress and everything complete, down to the very shoes—stained my face brown with a concoction of strong coffee, and rowed a pair of spectacles and a mar ket basket and set off across country on foot.

"On my way out of town I met a German soldier with his arm and hand dreadfully shattered. His bandage had slipped, and he was trying vainly to replace them. I helped him relieve his nasty wounds and rebanded them with a pocket bandage I happened to have with me. The soldier fumbled in his pocket and at last produced a crumpled five franc note, which he offered me. I refused it.

"Why do you refuse good money for a good deed, madame?" he said.

"Because I am an English woman," I replied, "and English women do not take payment for good deeds, however small or great they may be."

"I cannot believe you are English," he said, "but you are an angel, and angels have no nationality. May I kiss your hand?"

"I held out my hand. He bent low and kissed it. There were tears in his eyes, and I rather wish now I had accepted the five franc note to keep as a souvenir of Prussian gratitude."

Thought Shells Were Fireworks.

The London Morning Post prints an extract from a letter of a cavalry officer giving an account of how the Indian troops behaved in their first encounter with shell fire. Although a cavalry officer, the writer was serving in the trenches. In his letter, dated Oct. 24 and written from Belgium, he says:

"Night before last we were told that the regiment was going to be relieved by the Indians. I was delighted till I heard that my troops were to stay out to give them moral support, as it was their first go—a compliment, I suppose, although I didn't think so at the time. It was the most weird sight I've ever seen.

"There were six farms and a windmill blazing, all set alight by shell fire, when these fellows, with their turbans and with flashing eyes and teeth, came up out of the darkness. The undefeated dragoons, of course, became firm friends with them at once.

"Well, these natives had hardly got into the trenches on either side of me when the Germans opened fire. It was the worst half hour I've ever spent. As, of course, I couldn't make them understand and as they had never seen shells before, I didn't know what they would do. They behaved splendidly, and I think they thought the shells were fireworks let off for their benefit.

"The officer in charge of them told me that morning that he was most frightfully anxious as to how they'd do, but they shouted with glee when they saw a German and let him know what good shots they are."

"It Is Lovely Here!"

The Earl of Kingston, who is an officer of the Irish guards, in a letter to his wife at Kildonin Castle, County Roscommon, from France says:

"We had a bad night last night in the trenches, as we are only 800 yards from the Germans, and both sides are as jumpy as fleas, losing off at any moment, and the guns are keeping up a terrific fire on us, but doing little damage. We had two killed and two wounded yesterday.

"They have a large gun here that was meant for the siege of Paris. It throws a shell thirty-two inches long and makes a hole big enough to bury eighteen men in. This battle has been on for ten days, and we hope for the best.

"We have a farm here that has been taken and retaken, but we have it again at present. It is lovely at night, with hundreds of shells bursting all around, and if it were not for the death they bring they might be fireworks on a large scale.

"I have lost my servant and all my kit. Please send me one of those cigarettes tobacco and matches."

They Took His Shoe.

One of the British flying corps, Lieutenant Rainey, crossed the channel from France in a much damaged machine, thus completing in a fitting manner a series of thrilling adventures which have befallen him since he left English soil.

Lieutenant Rainey had been engaged for three weeks in reconnoitering at the front.

He had two machines disabled by rifle and shell fire, while a third caught fire in midair. On each of these occasions he just escaped death.

Once when he came down he was so exhausted that he lay with his head on his aeroplane and fell fast asleep. On waking he was astonished to find that the puttee, boot and sock of one leg had been removed by some one who, as the lieutenant himself suggested, took the opportunity of his slumber to get them as mementoes.

SMALL MARGINS FOR CONTESTANTS

Race now so Close that Change of a Few Subscriptions will Alter Standing of those who are Working for the Prizes.

As The Times-News circulation campaign draws toward a close the race is growing much more exciting and it is at the present time so close that only a very few subscriptions will change the whole order of winners.

There are quite a number of contestants who are in line for one of the big prizes but just who will be the fortunate ones to get them will depend on what is done between now and the end. No one has enough of a lead to enable them to pass up a single subscription or to waste a single moment of the remaining time. The race is too close for that and there are too many contestants who are right after subscriptions every minute and who are going to take advantage of every opportunity offered them.

So if you have worked in this contest up to now, do not spoil your chances by doing any less than your very best for the rest of the time. You can be the owner of the automobile if you just make every minute count and get in every subscription possible. But it will be necessary to make every moment count and to get every subscription possible for any less will just let you drop behind and put you out of the running for the big prizes.

LOSING A GOLF MATCH.

Just a Little Lack of Concentration Once Defeated Travers.

Writing on golf in the American Magazine, Jerome D. Travers suggests that lack of concentration, particularly with reference to keeping one's eye on the ball, is the greatest cause of bad golf playing. He says that to practice concentration is very difficult, as he knows from personal experience. He then tells the following story showing how he lost a great match through this fault:

"I know how hard this practice is. I have always thought that but for breaking this cardinal precept I might have had a very good chance to beat Hilton in 1911 at Apawamis—when the English champion carried away our chief amateur trophy.

"In the morning round over the first eighteen holes I had been playing badly and finished four down. Every one, including Hilton, considered the match all in and over. But in the afternoon I started with a rush and won the first three holes, leaving myself only one down and well within reach. At the next hole I had an easy two foot putt to make to win my fourth straight hole and square the match.

"I have always thought that if I had made that putt the odds would have been in my favor. Now, in putting I made it a set rule to look at the ball, until my club has struck the spot I am looking at. I have been able to do this by constant practice of concentration. But on this occasion I had a down hill putt, and I was overanxious. And just before my club struck the ball I looked up, pushed the ball to the right of the cup and missed the shot. This upset me for a moment, and I topped my drive at the next hole, losing it. The combination, coming suddenly, restored Hilton's confidence, which had been ebbing away, and he got going again, with the result that I was beaten three and two."

HER PERSONALITY FASCINATES HEARERS

MARGARET STAHL.

THE right to the title of the greatest woman reader of plays on the Lyceum platform has been fairly won by Margaret Stahl in a free field without favor. Her name carries with it the promise of an evening of rare enjoyment, wherever the Lyceum is known. Her splendid personality fascinates her hearers, and the charm of an elemental womanhood that is bigger than all art, and better than all acting, overwhelms them. Her art extends no less to the presentation of her work than in its selection, her repertoire being chosen with discriminating taste, plays which have a universal appeal, and whose lesson is an uplifting one, being chosen. The number of return engagements which she has won in recent years on some of the most discriminating courses of the country is an indication that she is growing in fame and favor and her art is deepening and widening. Her appearance here in the future insures an artistic treat.

WHAT WAR MEANS TO WOMEN

"One of the most pathetic and tragic things in all history is the part that woman has been forced to play in war. Innocent of causing it, helpless to prevent it, she has always been its greatest sufferer. Its burdens, its hardships, its terrors, its heart-breaking agonies have ever fallen on her with crushing force. And when the war is over what does it mean to those women? Often the dragging out of half a lifetime or more of a wretched existence, when the sun of their hope has set, when the light of their life has been extinguished, when nothing remains but years of endless, solitary drudgery to pay the cost of the monstrous war that has impoverished their country and robbed them of all they held dear!"

CHAPTER IX.

"Come in, dear Joe."

OUR visitors hesitated outside the door. "There are only two of them," whispered Planx.

As he spoke a short, bearded man in a thick overcoat stepped into the light, followed by a tall and strongly built companion. Both wore black visor masks, with fringe covering the mouth. I noticed they were shod in moccasins.

"Evenin'," said the tall man, who was throughout the spokesman. "My partner and me is come to make you an offer, Mr. Planx. We've got your daughter where you'll never find her, where you'd never dream of looking for her."

"Don't be too sure of that," growled Planx.

"If we agree on a bargain she shall be returned to you unhurt three days from the time the price is paid over, and that price is $100,000."

"Those are our terms. The question for you is do you want your daughter or do you not?"

The next incident was as swift as it was unexpected.

"I conjecture that is something of an easy question to answer," said Planx in his slow tones. "In fact, I—"

On the word he slipped out a revolver. But quick as was Planx's hand to carry out the impulse of his brain, Joe's was quicker. He knocked the revolver from Planx's grasp.

"You treacherous dog, Planx!" cried the kidnaper. "Is that how you keep faith? Well, we have a reply to that too. We offered to give up the girl for $100,000, now we make the price $150,000."

"I'll never pay a cent of it!" shouted Planx.

"When you come to change your mind," replied the kidnaper quietly, "just hang a white handkerchief on one of the trees at the edge of this wood. Then put the money in notes in that tin on the shelf. Leave us two clear days and you'll get your girl back safe. But if you monkey it will be the worse for her."

Without more words the two masked men left the hut, and like the explosion of a thunderstorm, Planx opened upon Joe.

November faced the storm with an entirely placid aspect until I began to wonder at his patience. But when at last he spoke the other fell dumb as if Joe had struck him.

"That's settled, Mr. Planx. You've done with me and I've done with you. Now quiet down and out!"

Planx opened his lips as if to speak, but, seeing Joe's face, he changed his mind and rushed from us into the darkness.

At once Joe put out the light. "We can't trust Planx just at the moment. He's far mad, but we'll have him back in half an hour to show him the way back to Wilshire's," he remarked with a chuckle.

And in fact this was exactly what happened. It was a subdued but still a very resentful Planx whom we escorted through the dark woods. On our way back to our camp Joe made a detour to examine the tracks of the kidnappers by the light of the lantern which he had carried with him.

As had been the case by Mooseshank lake, so now we found the trails very clear near the water's edge. Joe studied them for a long time.

"Well, you're out of it now, at any rate," said I.

"And what about my promise to Calvey?" he rejoined. "I'm deeper in it than ever. I've got to find Miss Virginy sure."

"You can't track her because of that threat in the letter to Planx?"

"That's so, but I'll be speaking to Miss Virginy before tomorrow night," said Joe quietly, nor, having made this dramatic announcement, would he say more.

The next morning Joe was early astir.

"What are you going to do today?" said I.

"I'm going to find out the name of the man that has Miss Virginy hid away. If you'll wait here, Mr. Quaritch, I'll come back as soon as I've done it. You've got your rod and there's plenty of fish in the lake."

With that I had to be content. Before starting Joe had laid a bet with me that he would come back with the name of her abductor, and I was wondering what else he had to go upon. Hardly any that I could think of—the trail of the two men and the golden hair, very little more.

About 2 o'clock I heard November call me.

"What about the bet?" I called on sight of him. "Who pays?"

"You pay, Mr. Quaritch," said Joe.

"Why, who is it, then?"

"A fellow called Hank Harper."

"Why, I've heard of him. He passes for a man of high character."

Joe laughed. "All the same, he's the chap who done it," said he. "I expect he's got her up at his cabin on Otter brook."

"Look here, November," I said. "You tell me Hank Harper is in the kidnaper's business and I believe you. Because I've never known you speak without solid facts behind you. But I think you owe me the whole yarn."

Joe pulled out his pipe. "All right, Mr. Quaritch. To begin at the beginning. There are two of them. One's this man Harper. I don't know who the other is, and it don't much matter. If we find Harper we find his partner. Well, Miss Virginy was fishing when they stole down upon her and carried her off. I've already told you what happened until they took to the canoe. They paddled across the lake and the two men got out, leaving Miss Virginy in the canoe to paddle herself round and land elsewhere."

"But surely she could have escaped?" I cried.

"She was under their rifles and had to do exactly what she was ordered. I found where she'd landed and followed her tracks to that little waterfall stream, and it was there I found the golden hair. So far, you see, everything fitted together as good as the jaws of a trap, and the message on the bit of paper about a ransom carried it further on. So did the talk we had with Harper—it must have been him did the speaking—at Black lake. When I knocked up Planx's revolver I was wonderful sorry to have to do it, but a promise is a promise, and he'd passed his word for a safe conduct. After, when my eyes fell upon the trail left by Harper's partner, I knew I never done a better act in my life. It give me a start, I can tell you, Mr. Quaritch! You see, all the weight was in the middle of the moccasin. The heels and toes were hardly marked at all."

November looked at me as if expecting me to see the meaning of this peculiarity, but I shook my head.

"It meant that the foot inside the moccasin was a very little one, a good bit shorter than the moccasin."

"You can't mean!" I began.

"Yes," said Joe. "The second person at Black lake wasn't a man at all, but just Miss Virginy herself."

"Well, if that was so, why, she had the game in her hands then. She had only to appeal to us—to speak."

Joe interrupted me. "Hers was another sort of game. You see, I'm pretty sure that Miss Virginy has kidnapped herself, or, at any rate, consented to be kidnapped. She had just paddled round and joined the two men later, and then when I come to think over it careful I saw how I might have been the name of the man that was helping her. I lit out for Wilshire's camp and asked the woman if there was anything of Miss Virginy's missing from her room. She said there wasn't. Then I saw my way a bit. I was in the woods with Miss Virginy last year, and I know she's mighty particular about personal things. I don't believe she could live a day without a sponge and a comb and, most of all, without a toothbrush. None of them high toned gals can. Isn't that so?"

"Yes, that is so, but—"

"Well," went on November, "if she went of her own free will, as I was thinking she did—or else why did she come to Black lake?—if, as I say, I was right in my notion and she'd made out the plans and kidnapped herself, the man who was with her would be only just her servant, in a manner of speaking. And I was certain that one of the first things she'd do would be to send him to some store to buy the things she wanted most. She couldn't get her own from Planx's camp without giving herself away, so she was bound to send Hank to like out new ones from somewhere."

"What happened then?"

"I started in on the stores round about this country, and with luck I stepped into the big store at Lavette and asked if any one had been buying truck of that kind. They told me Hank Harper. I asked just what. They said a hairbrush, a comb, a couple of toothbrushes and some other gear. That was enough for me. They weren't for Mrs. Hank, who's a halfbreed woman and don't always remember to clean herself on Saturdays."

"I see," said I.

"The things were bought yesterday, so it all fits in, and there's no more left to find out but why Miss Virginy acted the way she has, and that we'll know before tomorrow."

• • • • •

It was well on toward 10 o'clock that night before we reached Harper's cabin on Otter brook. At first we knocked and knocked in vain, but at length a gruff voice demanded angrily what we wanted.

"Tell Miss Virginy Planx that November Joe would like a word or two with her."

"Are you drunk," shouted the man, "or only crazy?"

"I've tracked her down fair and square, and I've got to see her."

"I tell you she isn't here."

"Let me in to make sure for myself."

"If a man comes to my door with a threat I'll meet him with my rifle in my hand. So you're warned," came from the cabin.

"All right, then, I'll start back to report to Mr. Planx."

On the words the door opened and a vivid, appealing face looked out.

"Come in, dear Joe," said a honeyed voice.

"Thank you, Miss Virginy, I will," said Joe.

We entered. A lamp and the fire lit up the interior of a poor trapper's cabin and lit up also the tall, slim form of Miss Virginy Planx. She wore a buckskin hunting shirt belted in to her waist, and her glorious hair hung down her back in a thick and heavy plait. She held out her hand to Joe with one of the sweetest smiles I have ever seen or dreamed of.

"You're not going to give me away, dear Joe, are you?" said she.

"You've given yourself away, haven't you, Miss Virginy?"

Virginy Planx looked him in the eyes, then she laughed. "I see that I haven't, but can I speak before this gentleman?"

Joe hastened to vouch for my discretion, while Hank Harper nursed his rifle and glowered from the background, where also one could discern the dark face of the half breed squaw. But Miss Virginy showed her complete command of the situation.

"Coffee for these two, please, Mrs. Harper," she cried, and while we were drinking it she told us her story.

"You maybe heard of old Mr. Schelberg of the combine?" she began. "My father wanted to force me to marry him. Why, he's fifty by the look of him, and I'd much rather drown my self than marry him."

"There's younger and better looking boys around, I surmise, Miss Virginy?" returned November meaningly.

Virginy flushed a lovely red. "Why, Joe, it's no use blinding you, for you remember Walter Calvey, don't you?"

"Sure! So it's him. That's good. But I heard he was out of his business," said Joe with apparent simplicity.

"I must tell you all or you won't understand what I did or why I did it. My father ruined Walter, because that would anyhow put off our marriage. Then when the Schelberg affair came on and he gave me no rest I could no stand it any longer. You see, he is so

VEGETABLE SOUFFLES.

FOR luncheon or dinner a vegetable souffle is delicious. Most vegetable soups may be used for the purpose. Care should be exercised in mixing the ingredients.

Browned in the Oven.

Cauliflower Souffle.—Beat separately the yolks and whites of three eggs. Chop finely half a pound of cooked cauliflower and add half a teaspoonful of salt, a pinch of pepper and grated Parmesan cheese to taste. Mix this with the yolks of eggs and put in a well buttered pie dish with the stiffly beaten whites of eggs on the top. Bake in a quick oven.

Tomato Souffle.—Take three large tomatoes, scald, skin and slice them. Cook in a double boiler with one bay leaf, a teaspoonful of salt, a slice of onion and six peppercorns for half an hour until the tomatoes are thoroughly cooked. Now melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add two tablespoonfuls of flour. Cook for a few minutes and then add one cupful of the strained juice of the cooked tomatoes. Keep over the fire, and when smooth pour into the beaten yolks of three eggs and set aside to cool. When cool add the whites of eggs, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake in a moderate oven.

Novel Uses of Sweet Potatoes.

Sweet Potato Souffle.—Select small sweet potatoes for this purpose. Slice lengthwise in order to get a layer of potato without slicing across the grain. Cut about twice as thick as Saratoga potatoes in order to allow for two crusts to the puff. Drop into cold water for an hour, drain and wipe perfectly dry. Have two pans of fat in readiness, one with the blue smoke just rising and the other rather hotter. Drop a few slices at a time in the first kettle and let them remain until half done. Drain and put them into the oven where they will keep hot for five minutes, then plunge into the second saucepan. Cook until brown.

Spinach Souffle.—Take a half peck of spinach, pick over, wash thoroughly, drain and put into a kettle with a half cupful of water and a teaspoonful of salt. Simmer ten or fifteen minutes, take up, chop and press through a colander. Add two tablespoonfuls of cream, the yolks of four eggs and a dash of cayenne. Fold in the beaten whites of four eggs and turn into a buttered dish. Cover the top with grated breadcrumbs and bits of butter, sprinkle with cheese and bake in a hot oven. Serve with egg sauce.

INVADE GERMANY; PEOPLE IN PANIC

Defenders at Border Break Before Russian Onslaught.

PRUSSIAN TOWNS ABANDONED

Fall of Cracow Is Said to Be Near.
600,000 Austro-Germans Cut Off From Their Center.

Petrograd, Nov. 10.—Germany is invaded. Great forces of Russian troops are pouring through gaps torn in the German armies on the eastern battle front, and the populace is fleeing before the victors.

At three points along the Russo-German border the czar has made good his boast that he would carry the fight to the kaiser on his own soil.

The provinces of Posen, Silesia and East Prussia are now occupied near the frontier by the czar's fighting men, and all Poland, excepting that section in the extreme southwest, is cleared of German troops. In southwestern Poland the enemy is falling back, unable to withstand the onslaughts of the Russians, who are striking heavily to take Cracow, the "gateway to Silesia."

As a result of the strategy of the Russian commander-in-chief, the Austro-German armies face disaster in great flank movements, which have divided their strength into three distinct parts. While an army of vast numbers is engaging the Germans in East Prussia, a strong detachment has broken through the German defenses in the northern part of Posen and is moving swiftly to the north-west in an endeavor to encircle the defenders of East Prussia in the north. At the same time another army has started a march on the city of Posen (Posen is 150 miles from Berlin).

The Russian left, which has been engaging the Austro-Germans in the south, is now only twenty-five miles from Cracow, and the Austro-Germans are falling back upon that city, which is strongly fortified, in an attempt to prevent the Russian hordes from occupying it. The capture of Cracow by the Russians would permit them immediately to launch a third army, with Breslau (200 miles from Berlin) for an objective, and after its occupation of Breslau, it could join the Russian army now marching on Posen and proceed toward Berlin.

The army now marching on Cracow already has accomplished one of the master strokes of the campaign in Galicia, the Austro-Germans in Galicia are cut off from the German defenders of the Thorn-Cracow line, and the Russians plan to hold them at bay until the central German army is defeated decisively. Thus 600,000 fighters are lost to the kaiser.

The Germans are weakening their forces now fighting against the allies by withdrawing troops from the west and sending them to stem the tide of defeat in the east.

Berlin Claims Success.
Berlin, Nov. 10.—It was officially announced by the war office that the Germans had captured 4000 Russians and ten machine guns in Poland, near Mals and Wyshtyten.

POPULACE FLEES

Germany Admits Russians Have Invaded Prussia.
Berlin, Nov. 10.—Rumors circulated during the past few days of a possible invasion by Russians have caused timid inhabitants of the border regions, from Breslau north to Posen, to abandon their country houses, despite the fact that General Von Hindenburg's army still stands between them and the Russians.

Some reports even mention that Bromberg, sixty-nine miles northeast of Posen, has been entered by Russian troops.

(This dispatch is the first admission that there has been even a rumor of a Russian invasion of Germany, and is the first acknowledgment from Berlin that the czar's armies have entered the Silesian and East Prussian lines).

JAPANESE MAY GO TO FRANCE

Idea of Sending Troops Into Europe Finds Favor.
London, Nov. 10.—From Tokyo comes the report that a Japanese army may be sent to the west to take its part with the British, French and Belgians in the struggles on the battlefields of Europe.

The suggestion has not yet taken tangible form, but Tokyo reports that the idea is attracting increasing attention and finds support in military circles.

The sending of a Japanese army to the west would be a movement without precedent and one which would emphasize the extent of the present conflict.

Portugal to Declare War.
Lisbon, Nov. 10.—Portugal probably will declare war against Germany. In an official announcement it was stated that if Portugal joins the war, German and Austrian vessels now in Portuguese ports will remain under the protection of this country until the end of the conflict.

FEAR WAR IN MEXICO TODAY

Ultimatum to Carranza Has Expired.

Agua Calientes, Nov. 10.—Today will determine whether war or peace shall prevail in Mexico.

The indications are at present that there will be war. No reply has yet been received from General Carranza to the ultimatum sent by the conference at Agua Calientes demanding that he retire from the office of provisional president.

The time limit set by the ultimatum expired at noon today. If he does not retire troops will be ordered to march on Mexico City and seize the government. The conference will reassemble to make final plans.

Carranza Issues a Decree.
Vera Cruz, Mex., Nov. 9.—General Carranza has issued at Cordoba a decree promising that the import and other taxes collected at Vera Cruz by the Americans since they have been in control of that seaport will not be levied again by the Mexicans after the American evacuation.

General Carranza, however, makes no reference to the demand made on him that those Mexicans who have been in the employ of the American authorities at Vera Cruz be given guarantees of protection. The decree was issued at Cordoba, where General Carranza is in conference with a committee from the Agua Calientes convention.

Russians Shell Bosphorus.
Paris, Nov. 10.—The protected cruisers Kagul and Pamiat Merkoria, of the Russian Black sea fleet bombarded the straits of Bosphorus and the coal depots off Eregli, on Saturday, according to an announcement made at Constantinople and forwarded from Athens. The Turkish fleet, it is added, went out to meet the Russian warships, but soon returned.

London, Nov. 10.—The Swedish steamer Atle was blown up by a mine in the North sea and foundered. Six of the crew were drowned. The others were landed at Yarmouth.

TABLE SIRUP FROM APPLES.

An Invention of Interest to Housekeepers and Owners of Orchards.
Chemists in the United States department of agriculture have succeeded in creating a totally new product for American tables—namely, apple cider sirup. This is a clear ruby or amber colored liquid of about the consistency of cane sirup or maple sirup and, like them, may be used for griddle cakes, cereals and flavoring purposes. Its flavor, however, is quite distinct, resembling more than anything else the taste of the substance which exudes from a baked apple.

To the apple grower this invention is of even more importance than to the housekeeper, for it supplies him with a new commercial outlet for his apple crop. In the past apples which, because of their appearance or otherwise, could not fetch a profitable price on the market, were frequently allowed to go to waste. It was possible, of course, to turn them into cider, but the difficulty of keeping cider sweet and its bulk often made it unprofitable to ship it any considerable distance. In consequence the market for cider in many cases is restricted to the area of production, and the demand is therefore frequently less than the supply. The consumption of vinegar is not sufficiently great to provide an outlet for all the surplus cider that might be made.

The new apple sirup, however, when properly sterilized and put in sealed bottles will keep indefinitely. In consequence the cider makers can use their excess apple juice for sirup and market the product gradually throughout the year instead of having their sales confined to a month or two in the fall, as is the case with cider.

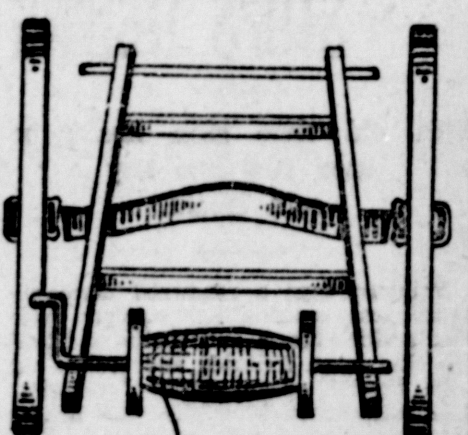

To make the new apple sirup a filter press and open kettles or some other concentrating apparatus must be added to the cider making mill. After the cider has been treated with pure milk of lime until nearly all of the natural malic acids have been neutralized the liquid is heated to boiling and filtered through the filter press. The resultant liquid is then evaporated as ordinary cane or sorghum sirup is. When allowed to cool the lime and acids form small crystals of calcium malate. These are removed by filtering the sirup once more through the filtering press. The final result is a sirup with the same basic composition as ordinary cane sirup, but with a quite distinct flavor and appearance. Incidentally it might be said that calcium malate sells for $2 a pound.

The new process is being tested on a commercial scale in Oregon, and the result of the experiment will afford valuable information as to the cost of manufacture. There is, however, no doubt that from a scientific standpoint the manufacture of the sirup is perfectly feasible and that, from the consumer's point of view, it is a very agreeable addition to one's diet.

Rewinding Barbed Wire.

The sketch shows a very useful device for winding loose wire and taking up old wire fences. Procure an old buggy axle and wheels and fasten two 2 by 4 sticks five feet long to the axle, as illustrated.

Provide the front end with a rod, the end of which is bent to form a crank. Two bent nails hold the block, which had to be cut out to allow the rod to be put in place. When the spool is on the nails are twisted so as to keep the rod in place. If the rod does not hold the spool tightly use wedges. One man pushes, and the man in front turns the crank. Wire can be wound as fast as a man can walk and just as evenly as when bought new.

To Keep Silage.

A good way to make the ensilage keep at the top of a silo when it is filled is to put part of a load of straw through the silo filler just before it is through the job; then sow a pall or two of oats on the straw covering and dampen them. This covering does away with about half of the spoiled ensilage, to be thrown out after the ensilage settles.

Do They?

A lot of men wonder why girls close their eyes when they are being kissed. But if the men would look into a mirror they would see the reason.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE KAISER AT HOME.

How He Freed His Mind to His Daughter's English Governess.

Many interesting facts bearing upon the kaiser as a family man and also as the proud ruler of an empire are given in "Memories of the Kaiser's Court," by Miss Anne Topham, who was for some time English teacher to the monarch's only daughter, now the Duchess of Brunswick. From this book we learn that the kaiser was wont to make jokes with his family at the breakfast table and even to indulge in punning.

Miss Topham and the kaiser frequently held conversations on the subject of England, and upon one occasion her imperial master remarked:

"You English people, you drink those awful fiery spirits—horrible stuff—whisky, brandy, what not! How can you imbibe such quantities of poisonous liquid, ruining your constitutions, simply ruining them—whisky and soda everywhere? No, it's awful! I tasted it once—like 'liquid fire'—ugh! Your drinking habits are fearful!"

Though professing great admiration of English everyday life, the kaiser had a profound contempt for English politics and politicians.

"Not one of your ministers," he said to me on one occasion, "can tell how many ships of the line you have in your navy. I can tell him—he can't tell me. And your minister for war can't even ride. I offered him a mount and every opportunity to see the maneuvers. Thanks very much for your majesty's gracious offer. Sorry can't accept it. I'm no horseman, unfortunately. A minister of war, and can't ride! Unthinkable!"

During his visits to England he evidently took careful note of valuable relics and mementos of bygone ages, and after one of these visits he thus expressed his thoughts:

"Ah, you have never had a Napoleon to plunder and burn your country houses! Your Reynoldses and Gaius-boroughs, where would they have been if Napoleon's marshals or his soldiers had seen them? Perhaps burnt or destroyed or sent to the Louvre. Think what it must mean to the children of a house to live with one of those pictures, to absorb it unconsciously into their mentalities! They must grow up with a love of beautiful things. They cannot help it. We have nothing of the kind. Our houses were stripped and burnt."

QUEER ANIMAL TRAPS.

Not Intended as Such, but They Prove Deadly Lures.

That almost unerring instinct which carries animals through grave dangers has led in many instances in the Midway and Sunset oil fields of California to their undoing. Chief among such victims are rabbits and water fowl.

A jackrabbit and a cottontail find a nice road, smooth hole. There are many such in the oil fields, where oil plying is a necessity for the transportation of oil to the refineries. The rabbits decide to set up housekeeping there. The cottontail desires a permanent home, and the jackrabbit wants a refuge safe from unrelenting man. Soon they discover their habitat is being moved. No doubt they are frightened, but they instinctively stay within their retreat. One end of the hole is closed. Even then they do not leave. Soon the other end of the hole is darkened. Then it is darkness eternal for the furry pair.

Some time later it is discovered that a newly laid oil pipe line is choked. After great labor the line is disjuncted and the remains of many rabbits removed. Thousands of rabbits have been thus exterminated in the oil fields. The death rate among water fowl is even greater. Again, as with the rabbits, instinct leads them to certain destruction. Every little lake of oil in the vicinity of a gusher is a trap for the unthinking birds. At twilight and dawn these tar colored lakes appear as bodies of water to the deluded fowl.—Scientific American.

Aftermath.

"Aftermath" is a persistently ill used word. Early July is the time of the "mow"—that is, the first mowing of the meadow. The short grass with a sufficiency of rain will grow again, and later will come the "second mow," or "aftermath." The phrase "The storm and its aftermath" seems a favorite with some story writers, but it is difficult to understand how a storm can have a second mowing.

No Place For Letters.

A learned young woman of Boston was spending her vacation in a little country place. To the local bookshop of the village she went one afternoon and made known her mental wants to the clerk:

"I should like the 'Letters of Jane Welsh Carlyle.'"

"I beg your pardon, miss," said the clerk, "but this ain't no postoffice."—New York Globe.

A Package of Letters

By RYLAND BELL

One cold, blustering day in November I took my winter overcoat out of the bag where it had been placed the autumn before to put it in commission for the winter. I rammed my right hand down into the pockets—why I know not—and felt kid. Taking it out, I found a pair of No. 6 lady's gloves. There was a slight odor of perfume about them that the odor of moth balls had not entirely destroyed. But perhaps this was imagination.

Thinking that I might have some one else's coat, I looked at the maker's name. It was that of my tailor. There was no such mistake. Perhaps there might be something else in the coat. I put my hand into the other pocket and pulled out a bunch of letters. They were not in envelopes, so I got no address.

I put on my thinking cap to try to call up some reason for these articles being in my overcoat pocket. Where had I been when spring was coming on? I had gone on a trip to the Panama canal. I had taken the overcoat with me, using it for the first few days.

During the homeward voyage I had noticed a young lady traveling with her mother and a young man who was attentive to her. The girl I admired; to the man I took a dislike. On the evening before our arrival at New York I was seated near this couple. The wind was chilly, and I wore my overcoat. Wishing to smoke, I went below for a cigar, leaving my coat on a steamer chair. Meeting a friend, I consented to go with him to the smoking room. I remained there till all had turned in, then, remembering my overcoat, went on deck for it and found it in the chair where I had left it.

My solution was this: The girl near whom I had been sitting, feeling chilly, had put on my coat or thrown it over her. The fellow was a lover and had been dismissed. The girl's letters had been returned, and she had slipped them temporarily in the coat pocket. Having the gloves in her hand, she slipped them in the other pocket.

There were doubtless defects in this hypothesis, but it was the best I could form. It was supported by the fact that I had seen the lady go ashore and the man was not with her.

I had envied him on the ship and wished that I was in his place, for there was something in the girl's appearance that appealed to me. I felt that it would be very easy for me to fall in love with her. Now that I had property of hers in my possession, if I could find her, its return would serve for an introduction. But I was between two stools. I could only hope to find a clue to her whereabouts by reading the letters, which I had no right to do. If I did not read them I must remain ignorant as to who she was. I read a few of them; but, gaining nothing, I refrained from proceeding further.

A year passed, during which I thought a great deal about the girl of the gloves, as I called her, but did not meet her. Then one winter while at St. Augustine, Fla., strolling past a group on the beach, in one of them I recognized her. She did not notice me, and I walked on, but remained on the beach till her party left it and I saw them go to a hotel. The same evening I betook myself to the same hostelry. I watched for an opportunity to catch her alone and was rewarded one morning by seeing her sitting on the hotel porch. Approaching her uncovered, I addressed her:

"I beg your pardon, but did you not visit the Panama canal about a year ago?"

"I did," she replied, looking at me as she would at any intruder who was trying to force an acquaintance.

"And did you not one evening temporarily appropriate an overcoat lying on a steamer chair beside you to protect you from the night air?"

"I did."

"Then I presume these gloves belong to you."

I handed her her gloves. She took them and examined them, then said, "I have no remembrance of these gloves."

"That is not remarkable, since it is a year and a half since you put them in my overcoat pocket. Perhaps the package"—holding up the letters—"may stimulate your memory."

"What is it?" she asked coldly. I withdrew into my shell.

"I think I must have made a mistake in the person," I said, putting the package into my pocket, and was about to walk away when she called to me.

"Excuse me, but I mislaid a package of letters about that time."

"Love letters?"

"Have you read them?"

"Only two or three in order to discover a clue to the ownership that I might return them."

Her manner changed. She remembered appropriating my coat, but it had never occurred to her that she might have slipped the letters into the pocket temporarily.

The ice was broken. I learned from her in time that she had been on the eve of an engagement to the recipient of the letters when she learned something to his discredit and wrote him for them. He had followed her on her trip to the canal, taking the letters with him, and she had succeeded in getting them the night before she reached New York.

The next day letter she wrote was to me.

He Would Be Better Liked.

It seems a shame that a book agent can't sit down and read his favorite works instead of putting in his time selling them.

FOR RHEUMATIC- NEURALGIA PAINS

Rheuma Dissolves the Uric Acid Which Settles in the Tissues of Tender Nerves.

Rheumatic-neuralgia is one of the most painful forms of rheumatism. It is due to weak kidneys allowing a settlement of uric acid in the tissues of the body near the tender nerves. There is no swelling or fever, but agonizing pain. Liniments may deaden the pain, but the disease must be cured through the kidneys.

Rheuma, the splendid remedy for all forms of rheumatism, quickly dissolves the uric acid crystals and passes them off through the kidneys and bowels, and the immediate relief is so pronounced that you won't guess you are being rid of rheumatism—you will know it.

"I suffered with rheumatic-neuralgia for six years. Tried different remedies, but was not benefited until I used Rheuma. I have taken three bottles and am entirely free from the disease. I was so bad I could not sleep nights; now I sleep well, and my kidneys work perfectly."—P. W. Miller, Catawissa, Pa.

The People's Drug Store and all druggists sell Rheuma, and will return your money if not satisfied. It is inexpensive, but worth many times its cost.

SULPHUR DRIES UP ECZEMA AND STOPS ITCHING

This old time skin healer is used just like any cold cream.

Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, is a common household remedy made into a thick cream will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with Eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the Eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

He tells Eczema sufferers to get from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold sulphur and apply it to the irritated parts the same as you would any cold cream.

For many years common bold sulphur has occupied a secure position in the practice of dermatology and cutaneous affections by reason of its parasite-destrorying property. It is not only parasiticidal, but also antipruritic, antiseptic and remarkably healing in all irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always effecting a permanent cure it never fails to instantly subdue the angry itching and irritation and heal the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.
